The purpose of the Psychological Service Centers is to deliver high quality services to the community and to provide training to advanced doctoral students who are committed to a career in Clinical Psychology.

Services are furnished by advanced doctoral students of the Pacific University Oregon Graduate School of Professional Psychology, supervised by experienced licensed clinical psychologists and a center director. OGSPP admits students to study for the Doctor of Psychology degree (Psy.D.) who have a Master's degree or equivalent. Students working in the Psychological Service Centers have completed the majority of their doctoral training in clinical psychology and have had previous experience in a variety of mental health settings.
