Pacific Basin Studies Program

THE UNIVERSITY

Pacific University is an independent institution dedicated to providing students with a high quality liberal arts education. Founded in 1849 by Congregational pioneers, it is one of the oldest universities in the West. The campus is situated in the town of Forest Grove, 25 miles west of Portland, Oregon's largest city.

The University enrolls more than 1,000 students and enjoys an unusually favorable student/faculty ratio, which results in a very personalized education both in and outside the classroom.

THE PROGRAM

The new Pacific Basin Studies Program offers students the opportunity to study the following subjects related to countries surrounding the Pacific Ocean:

- Languages
Chinese, Japanese, Spanish, and English for foreign students
- International Business
Resources, trade, monetary practices, economics
- Political Science and History
Government, politics, national development, and international relations
- Cultures of the Pacific Basin
Art, philosophy and customs

In addition, seniors will be encouraged to participate in an internship in the Portland area or overseas. The internships provide students with work/study experience in a professional setting related to their career interests.

Students may participate in the Pacific Basin Studies program while majoring in any one of the traditional disciplines offered at Pacific University. The students can therefore earn certificates in Pacific Basin Studies along with their baccalaureate degrees.

The basic study program includes the following distribution of courses:

Area	Semester Hours
Language	12
International Business.	3
Political Science	3
Cultures of the Pacific Basin.	3
History	3

The student will supplement these requirements with a minimum of 12 additional semester-hours of coursework.

THE HERITAGE

Pacific University has a long tradition of interest in the peoples and cultures of the Pacific Basin. More than a century ago the first Far Eastern students came from Japan to enroll on the campus. Since then Pacific has served students from Japan, Hawaii, China, Philippines, Taiwan, Vietnam and Thailand.

As interaction between the United States and the Pacific Basin countries increases, so do the career opportunities for people with an understanding of this area. The Pacific Basin Studies Program will help prepare students to fill this growing demand.
